MORE than 40 schoolgirls met with 26 successful women as part of the Council's fourth 'Inspiring Young Women' event.

Coinciding with International Women's Day, the event aimed to galvanise, empower and inspire the young women and show them that they could make it in a male-dominated world. Dr Ronx Ikharia, Emergency Doctor at Homerton hospital, volunteered her

Creative businesses in Hackney Wick are set to have more support to stay in the local area thanks to new planning rules; pictured: Felstead Street

Protecting the Wick

CREATIVE businesses that have made Hackney Wick their home will have more protection and support to stay in the area after new, joint Council and London Legacy Development Corporation planning rules were approved.

Under the plans, which have been given the green light by the Mayor of London, landowners in the area will be forced to re-provide existing genuinely affordable work and studio space in any new developments – with rents set at less than half of the current market rate.

The rules are set out in the Hackney Wick Central Masterplan, which will guide how new buildings in the area should look, what facilities they should provide, and how the regeneration underway in the area can build on its industrial heritage.

Around 8,400sqm

“Creative and artistic businesses are at the heart of Hackney Wick, and we’re determined to protect the makers” of existing low-cost workspace will be re-provided in new developments under the planning rules, alongside hundreds of new homes, retail and community facilities, and better streets and public spaces.

The masterplan marks the latest intervention to safeguard workspace and existing businesses in Hackney Wick.

The Council is already in the process of refurbishing and letting two existing buildings that it owns – the Old Baths on Eastway and the Trowbridge Centre on Trowbridge Road – to local workspace providers.

They will manage the buildings for existing small, independent and artistic firms at heavily subsidised rates over the next seven years, while redevelopment takes place on other local sites, enabling them to stay in the area.

In December, the Mayor of London also designated Hackney Wick and Fish Island as one of the capital's first-ever Creative Enterprise Zones to boost creative communities.

The new initiative is set to protect the creative sector by increasing affordable spaces for artists and entrepreneurs and boosting job opportunities for local people.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, said: “Creative and artistic businesses are at the heart of Hackney Wick, and we’re determined to protect the makers that make this corner of our borough unique and inspiring.

“While new developments will bring new homes and businesses, these new rules will balance that with opportunities for existing businesses and residents to secure new premises or find ways into a career in the creative or tech sectors.

“Our intervention will also ensure new developments work together to benefit the whole community as much as possible, rather than in a piecemeal way.

“While we can’t control all the changes happening in Hackney Wick, we’re determined to bridge the gap between an exciting new economy, and residents and businesses who have told us they feel at risk of being left behind by redevelopment.”

Hackney Council's apprentices and managers were celebrated at an awards ceremony, as part of National Apprenticeship Week

Appreciate apprentices

NATIONAL Apprenticeship Week was celebrated by the Council with an awards ceremony that recognised apprentices and managers for the work they do.

As one of the biggest employers in Hackney, the Council plays a leading role in providing apprenticeships for residents. Currently it employs over 100 apprentices across every service area.

Coinciding with National Apprenticeship Week, from 4 to 8 March, the Hackney Apprenticeship Network was also launched to support local businesses to employ apprentices. The idea is to connect employers with potential candidates.

Emily-May Mustafa, public health apprentice and winner of the 'Apprentice Champion' award, said: "There is something magical about being an apprentice within the Council – and there's an opportunity to be a part of the apprenticeship community we've created."

Nia O'Garro-Simpson, communications apprentice for the Council, agreed.

She said: "What I like about my apprenticeship is the creative freedom that I get on projects, as well as seeing my work online or in the newspaper. I've learnt a lot about how to manoeuvre in the digital world and I'm excited to see where I can go with it."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "Hackney apprentices bring a fresh energy and perspective to the Council. They are key to developing a talented workforce and, in the process, they advance the skills they need in a fast changing labour market."

"I want businesses across Hackney to learn from our success, and gain the same benefits we have from having a quality apprenticeship programme."

Hackney apprenticeships are open to anyone who lives or has been educated in the borough, or are receiving Hackney leaving care services.

“What I like about my apprenticeship is the creative freedom that I get on projects as well as seeing my work online”

All Council apprentices aged 18 and over are paid a starting salary of more than £20,000 per year, which is above London Living Wage, and well above the average apprenticeship salary.

Council apprentices are given accredited training from a high-quality provider, a package of support – which includes mentoring – and support to progress into a permanent job or a higher apprenticeship qualification within the Council.

PurpleSTARs provide the beat for Disabled Access Day event

A LIVE DJ, songs and spoken word pieces celebrated Disabled Access Day, and marked the end of the 'Roots, Rhythms & Records: The Sounds and Stories of African & Caribbean Music in Hackney' exhibition at Hackney Museum, on 16 March.

The purpleSTARs, a group of performers who have disabilities, helped organise the event which coincided with the final day of the exhibition. The artists wrote original songs and poems to perform for visitors, inspired by the exhibition and the countries where their ancestors were born.

Rufaro Asuquo, 24, and Eusebius 'Lee' Phillips, 35, members of the purpleSTARs, said: "The event was really empowering. We talked about our links with Ghana, Barbados, Jamaica and Nigeria. We are all very proud of our lineage."

The event was run in collaboration with Raw Material, the RIX Centre at the University of East London and the University of Reading.

Hackney Museum is accessible and has turning space for wheelchair users within its exhibitions space.

Pupils submerge themselves in news from under the sea

PUPILS from Princess May Primary School, N16, took part in a live broadcast of 'Deep Ocean Live', one of the first news broadcasts from under the sea, as part of a visit to the Sky Studios on 20 March.

The show was transmitted live from 300 metres beneath the Indian Ocean, in the coral atoll off Aldabra, an area so remote that more people have walked on the moon than explored it.

For three days presenters Anna Botting, Mark Austin and Thomas Moore dived under the water and examined one of the world's most protected sites and the effects that single-use plastic has on it.

The group of Year 9 and 10 students spoke to the presenters on air about plastic, coral health and a number of other topics. Pupil Shakira said: "Seeing the scientists in the submarine was exciting."

Hoxton to Hollywood

Alfred Hitchcock's stellar career began in Hackney's Gainsborough Film Studios

By Liam Cunningham

ONE of the borough's trendiest neighbourhoods, Hoxton, is often associated with the arts and the creative industries.

Many believe this is a relatively new phenomenon, dating back to the 1990s when artists started moving to the area. However, take a walk up towards the canal and just north of Shoreditch Park and you will see the creative heritage of Hoxton dates back much further.

Gainsborough Studios towers over the park and this complex of high-end flats resembles many of the developments popping up around East London these days. But if you walk into the building's courtyard there is something a bit different – a giant sculpture of a head that nods to the site's past.

The head is a monument to the 'Master of Suspense', Alfred Hitchcock, who began his film career in Hoxton.

The apartment block is named after the film studio that was on the site between the 1920s and 1950s: Gainsborough Film Studios. Opened as the offshoot of an American film studio, it became known as 'Hollywood by the canal' locally. Gainsborough was famed for its romance films and melodramas and some of the biggest stars from Britain and beyond passed through its doors. But it is Hitchcock that remains the most celebrated of its luminaries and he is rightly honoured there today.

Born in Leytonstone in 1899, Hitchcock moved all over East London with his family as a child. He trained to be an engineer but also took art classes and worked as a writer before starting in the film industry.

He started out working at Gainsborough Film Studios designing the title cards for silent films and worked his way up to director.

In 1927, after working in the studio for years, he made – what he later called – the first 'true Hitchcock film', 'The Lodger: A Story of the London Fog', which a critic at the time proclaimed 'the finest British picture ever made'.

Hitchcock continued to work with Gainsborough studios throughout the 1920s and 30s and made one of his most celebrated films of his British era there, 'The Lady Vanishes'. The story is set on a train travelling across the Balkans, but was in fact all shot on site in the small studio in Hoxton.

After the success of his British films, Hitchcock made the move to Los Angeles, in America, and made dozens of celebrated films in Hollywood between the 1940s and the 70s, including 'Rear Window', 'Psycho' and 'The Birds'.

Today, he is remembered as one of the most influential film directors ever – and he got his start in Hoxton.

Gainsborough Film Studios was open between 1924 and 1949 and hundreds of films were produced there. An important chapter in the creative history of Hoxton, it is fitting that the site has maintained the name to keep the memory of this period alive.

The developers of the site were also keen that the site would continue to be a place where creative companies could work, and there is office space reserved for such businesses, staffed by young creatives.

If you go up to Gainsborough Studios to have a look at the sculpture you can see them working away at computers in these modern offices. Maybe one of them is the next Alfred Hitchcock?

To coincide with International Women's Day, on 8 March, 40 schoolgirls from three Hackney schools met with 26 successful women as part of the Council's fourth 'Inspiring Young Women' event

Women of the future

The Council's successful 'Inspiring Young Women' event galvanised 40 schoolgirls

AROUND the world women face an uphill struggle for gender equality – whether it's in regard to pay, education, access to healthcare or safety. This is why the Council, for the fourth year running, hosted its 'Inspiring Young Women' event on 6 March.

To coincide with International Women's Day – on 8 March – 40 schoolgirls from three Hackney schools met with 26 successful women, who all volunteered their time to offer career advice.

The day began with an icebreaker from Abi Wright, founder of posture and body confidence company for women, Inspiring Margot. She had the audience on their feet learning projection and posture techniques.

Abi said: "So much has changed for women, but we still have a long way to go. Research has shown that there won't be equal pay for another 217 years which just isn't good enough."

"It's really important to inspire young women to be themselves and work hard, so that they can do whatever they want and be whoever they want."

The icebreaker was followed by a panel discussion with five panellists from a variety of backgrounds and occupations.

“It's really important to inspire young women to be themselves and work hard, so that they can do whatever they want”

On the panel were Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney; Kate Conway, Violinist, Educator and Founder Director of Suzuki; Naomi Smith, Operations Manager at Virgin Sports; Dr Ronx Ikharia, Emergency Doctor at Homerton hospital; and La Braya Buffong, the Council's Digital Communications Assistant.

The panellists had the audience thinking, discussing and laughing with presentations on their lives and work.

Kate played her LED-lit violin, while wearing an incredible costume of her own making. She said: "It's important to be visible in our diverse ways so that we are giving back to the next generation to inspire them."

"It's important to be true to yourself and to really find yourself. In schools, especially, it's about grades and not who you are. But to find who you are is the most important thing."

Dr Ronx, who is also a host on the BBC show 'Operation Ouch!', roused the crowd with an inspirational speech.

She said: "There will always be challenges in your life, things that you can't change."

"If you have a dream – regardless of your background, gender, sexuality, wealth or health – with the right attitude, the right people around you and ultimate belief in yourself, you can do it. Whatever you do, you will always be winning."

panel discussion, the young women were put into groups for smaller, more personal discussions with the volunteer professionals.

Each group had a chance to rotate and speak to a variety of professionals, providing the young women with a breadth of information and opportunity prospects.

The event concluded with a networking session where the young women and all 26 professionals were able to mingle, exchange contacts, experiences and aspirations.

Sofia Giraldo, from Stoke Newington School, who aims to be a professional dancer one day, said: "I found the event amazing, I really enjoyed it! I love that people told me their stories, their backgrounds and I could see the similarities that I have with them."

Deputy Mayor Bramble, added: "I really appreciate so many of Hackney's successful women giving up their time and sharing their expertise to inspire the next generation."

"This is the fourth time we have held this event and each year it demonstrates that although traditional paths to success – such as through school sixth form, college and university – can be hugely productive, there are other ways to aspire and achieve your goals, such as apprenticeships and internships."

SEAN Pollock is telling a story about Dervis Konuralp, a Hackney Paralympian he has photographed a few times over the years.

“He goes around local schools, giving inspiring talks to kids and has this line that I love. He says: ‘Hackney used to be considered an excuse, now it’s an opportunity’. It’s certainly been a huge opportunity for me, as a photographer.”

Sean, who has lived in Hackney since 2003, has carved out a successful career, publishing his work in The Sunday Times Magazine, Hackney Today and on the BBC. He has photographed stars from Robbie Williams to Sir Alex Ferguson. Yet he keeps being drawn back to the life on his own doorstep.

“I’ve just been updating my website and decided to include a gallery of my favourite Hackney photos from the last decade,” he says. “It was so difficult to narrow it down! I Love the variety of Hackney, it’s one of the most diverse places in the world.”

A lot of photography, he explains, is about difference: “contrasts in appearance or religion or style. Often a combination of these elements leads to the most interesting photographs.”

Sean’s photographs have been praised for their warmth and humanity.

He says: “I want to catch moments with emotion as they happen,” and Hackney is great place to find that emotion.

Originally from Glasgow, he sees parallels between that city and Hackney. Sean says they both have: “Friendly, outgoing people who are happy to strike up a conversation with a stranger or share an opinion, often unprompted.”

Pictured on these pages are a selection of his favourite places and events.

Capturing the moment

Sean Pollock’s photographs document Hackney’s transformation into a vibrant, confident community over the last decade

HACKNEY CARNIVAL

“I’ve been working at the Carnival for years now, I’ve seen it grow into a wonderful celebration of music, culture and costume. It’s my favourite day in the borough.

1. I think she’s actually taking a selfie here, resplendent in her plumage.

2. This one was taken when the day-to-day traffic starts to reclaim the roads. It’s not quite moving, though, because people are still determined to stretch out the fun of Carnival.

3. I love this shot. It was taken on Ridley Road, where the sound systems are found. It’s coming towards the end of carnival and the sun is setting and bathing the revellers in the warm glow of Golden Hour.”

HACKNEY MARSHES

4. “Hackney Marshes is legendary. It’s an incredible resource to have on our doorstep. This photo was part of a series looking at how the different teams manage to get their nets up. Some would do it by throwing it like a fishing net, others would put a wee player on a big player’s shoulders. This player was just having a go on his own, and doing a pretty good job actually.”

LGBT PICNIC, ST MARY'S SECRET GARDEN

5. "This guy embodies the diversity and the colour of Hackney. It's a place where you can not only be yourself, but really enjoy being yourself."

ACTIVE OLDER PEOPLE

6. "There's something heart-warming about this. It was shot in a community hall next door to St Joseph's Hospice, during a dance session designed to encourage fitness and socialising for older people."

THE LONDON YOUTH GAMES

"One of the highlights of the last decade has been seeing Hackney rise from around 30th to third place in the London Youth Games, last year. 7. This photo is about Hackney was changed by the Olympics, and the facilities and opportunities now available. You can see the elegant curve of the velodrome, and get a sense of how professional and well coached Cycling Club Hackney are. These clubs weren't here 15 years ago."

8. When starting out as a photographer, I was introduced to the work of Henri Cartier-Bresson. His philosophy is all about 'the decisive moment' and the fact there is nothing in this world that does not have a decisive moment, you've just got to be there and you've got to catch it. That's the challenge. Sometimes you don't know you've got it till you look back. This shot was taken at 6000th of a second, and that's where a bit of luck comes in."

FAWCETT ESTATE, E5

9. "It's hard to put my finger on what, exactly, I love about this photo [taken at a community sports event on Fawcett Estate]. There are boys, girls and children all playing the same game, outside and away from screens. It's about a strong community."

PURIM CELEBRATIONS

"I've been going to Purim in Stamford Hill for the past two years and I get interesting photos each time. It's an ongoing personal project. The Orthodox Jewish community is often seen as conservative but Purim is like a carnival. It's joyful and expressive, a great insight into a fascinating culture."

10. I love this photo and put it on my Instagram page on New Year's Eve. It says something simple about shared humanity, and that physical warmth of human contact."

11. I was shooting in the snow and it created a lovely contrast with all the black outfits I was seeing. Then, I spotted this white space boy. I had to make sure he didn't get lost in the snow so I ran round quickly to compose the shot so he was silhouetted against the dark pavement."

WHEN I was a child, the woods and fields were where I would run away to," says Kate Poland. "They were somewhere I felt safe and comforted. I suppose that has stayed with me."

Kate, an award-winning community gardener, is the UK's first postcode gardener, a role created by Friends of the Earth with the aim of transforming the UK's towns and cities one postcode at a time.

Over the next 10 months, Kate will work with E5 residents to give hundreds of front gardens, balconies and shared green spaces a green makeover.

It's a big job, but it isn't her only one. Kate moved from the green fields of Kent to a London squat when she was 19 because, she says: "I was tired of feeling on the fringes of everything. I wanted to be at the centre."

After taking a typing course, she worked at the BBC for 20 years, working her way up to a broadcast journalist before retraining as a teacher.

She is currently teaching a class of unaccompanied refugee children. Some have already spent a year in the chaos of Calais before making it to the UK.

Kate says: "They are from the Sudan, Syria and Iraq and they are astonishing people. I've always believed strongly that we must welcome people in if we can. It's our humane duty."

Teaching English to Syrian refugees might seem a world away from planting sunflowers in Homerton, but Kate finds parallels between them.

She says: "There's something very powerful and important about granting people access to land," pointing out that across London you find estates with fenced off patches of grass that no one walks on, bearing signs reading 'no ball games'.

Kate continues: "It sets up so many barriers to people feeling a sense of welcome and belonging. I think it's all connected. If other people could feel the same sense of belonging that I get from planting my feet on the earth and some seeds in the soil..."

It was partly this conviction in the natural world's power to change lives and communities that led her to quit her job at the BBC and, in 2010, to turn her eye to an unused lot behind Mare Street.

She says: "I could see these swathes of grass and bramble and I thought: we could do something great with that."

With help from an army of willing volunteers, she turned the space into Cordwainers Garden, a blooming urban oasis.

Regular dye workshops were held using flowers, leaves, weeds and bark gathered from the garden, and events welcomed children and community groups. Hackney Herbal was also launched, growing and using herbs that benefit health and wellbeing at different sites around the borough.

Kate says: "From the garden, our social enterprise Cordwainers Grow was born, to promote and support community growing spaces."

Although the garden itself is now closing, these projects will continue in new homes and Kate's work as the E5 postcode gardener will ensure its spirit endures.

"The social, environmental and even political benefits of gardens need to be recognised," says Kate. "In this time, when many of us feel so powerless, just growing something can make you feel powerful again."

"It's a positive, productive, creative act. And it might be small, but if we all planted a sunflower in our front gardens, or on a balcony, it would make a massive difference to our wider environment."

For the next 10 months,

"In this time, when many of us feel so powerless, just growing something can make you feel powerful again"

E5 residents will be able to get Kate's expert advice on all this as she works with local groups ecoActive and Daubeney Fields Forever to make Friends of the Earth's 10xGreener idea a reality.

They can request a visit from her, to help them green-up their front garden or, says Kate: "Any private space that the public can benefit from."

They can also attend workshops she will be holding in cafes and estates.

"I'd love to convert everyone," laughs Kate. "But I'm content just to work with those who are interested, and where I'm welcomed."

That said, the great thing about gardening is, as she points out, that it crosses cultures, and ages.

"Getting together with your neighbours to plant and grow brings people together," she says.

And while those neighbours don't even have to share a language, it sends a loud message. One about collective pride in the community, and of hope.

Waves of the Modern Age: An RGB Universe

Until 29 June, Hoxton Square Bar & Kitchen, N1 6NU

WE'VE all been in a bar for a bit too long and begun to think that the wallpaper was moving. This time, however, it's all too real.

Between now and the end of June, visitors to Hoxton Square Bar & Kitchen will find animals, flowers, sea creatures and skeletons intertwining in psychedelic shades on its walls.

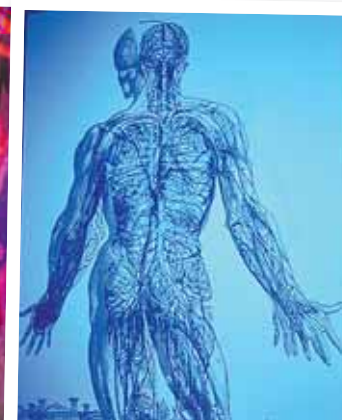

It's all thanks to the artist Carnovsky, whose dramatic wallpaper uses a clever interplay of lighting and three different layers to create the appearance of movement.

The three layers, we're told, belong to distinct elements of the animal kingdom, different anatomical parts, and specific psychological and emotional states. Taken together, they create 'an exploration of the surface's deepness'.

It makes for an Instagrammable exhibition. Entrance is free.

The Crucible

27 March-11 May, The Yard Theatre, E9 5EN

IT'S billed as the biggest show in the Yard Theatre's – already rather impressive – seven-year history. And we can see why. 'The Crucible', Arthur Miller's seminal depiction of a community torn apart by a witch hunt, is to be directed by the theatre's artistic director Jay Miller. It might be over 60 years since the play was written, and more than 300 since the real-life Salem witch trials on which it is based, but the play remains as terrifyingly plausible and urgent as ever. "We need to look back in order to move forward," explains Jay. "The Crucible speaks of a world torn apart, a community that, driven by fear, becomes isolated individuals, scared, and desperate to protect themselves. This speaks powerfully too today."

'The Crucible' runs at The Yard Theatre from 27 March to 11 May and is suitable for over 14s. Ticket prices increase as the theatre fills, so prices will vary between performances, but locals get 30 per cent off all tickets with a free Yard Local Card and those under 26 can get £5 tickets on the door for all performances that are not sold out.

Mary, Queen of Scots

1-13 April, The Old Church, Stoke Newington, N16 9ES

THE only surviving Elizabethan church in London is hosting its first opera premiere. Better still, it's all about the darkest, most dramatic rivalry of the Elizabethan era. Associate Artists at The Old Church in Stoke Newington and Olivier Award-winning opera company OperaUpClose have developed a brand-new English version of Donizetti's opera 'Mary, Queen of Scots'.

Mary has been imprisoned by her cousin, Elizabeth I of England, who is coming under pressure to execute the Catholic queen in order to protect England's interests. But don't let the story's heritage fool you.

"It's about weighing up the right thing for an individual against the right thing for a country. It's about suspicion of foreigners and of people with different beliefs," says Robin Norton-Hale, the company's artistic director. Adding: "It feels very relevant right now."

'Mary, Queen of Scots' is staged at The Old Church from 1 to 13 April.

Tickets are £10-£35 (concessions £5). To find out more, and to book tickets, visit: theoldchurch.org.uk

OVER 200 young people and their families attended the third annual Hackney Youth Awards to celebrate young people from across the borough.

More than 50 young people were put forward for the awards, with nominations made by youth workers and other professionals working with them. The winners were reviewed by an independent panel of young people, who also helped organise the event at Hackney Town Hall on 20 March.

There were 15 winners overall, with categories ranging from 'Arts & Culture' and 'Sports' to 'Young Adventurer' and 'Overcoming Adversity'.

Shani Charles, 17, winner of the 'Overcoming Adversity' award, said: "It's really nice to win this award because I've been nominated before and I came runner-up. So to actually win this time means a lot to me."

The audience heard some inspirational stories, as well as four performances: a song from Hackney Borough Music Choir; a duet from dancers Jordan & Djamilla; a poem performed by Faith Buffong; and a performance from singer Nina Hudson.

The event was hosted by Hackney's Young Speakers Beverley Tetteh and Abullahi Yussuf, and included speeches from the Chairs and Vice Chairs of the Hackney Young Futures Commission. The commission is working with young people to see how they view Hackney.

The Mayor, Deputy Mayor and Speaker of Hackney presented the awards and congratulated the winners.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: "These awards are a great way to recognise and celebrate Hackney's young people who put in a lot of hard work and time to give back to their communities."

News in brief

Volunteer recognised for her work with Jewish community

A VOLUNTEER at a Hackney charity has been awarded for her work with girls in the Orthodox Jewish community. Helen Griffith, pictured, from Leaside Outdoor Activity Centre in Clapton, won the 'Impact on Equality and Diversity' award at the British Canoeing Volunteer and Recognition Awards on 9 March.

Helen has been a member and volunteer at Leaside Outdoor Activity Centre for over 20 years. Thanks to the efforts of Helen and other volunteers, the club's Monday session now hosts 50 Orthodox Jewish girls, aged eight to 19. Tizra Nussbaum, whose daughters attend the club, said: "Our girls get very little physical exercise because it has to be a girls' group, and in an environment where there won't be men watching."

Speaking after her award Helen said: "I want to use this award to give the club recognition as we would love to do more with the community. Everyone loves what we do and is so enthusiastic about it."

It's time to reveal your alter ego

YOUNG people across the borough are being urged to show off their talents by entering Alter Ego, as part of this year's Council-run Discover Young Hackney Festival. Previous finalists have performed alongside the likes of Yxng Bane, Krept and Konan, Lady Leshurr and Rudimental at the grand final.

Auditions for budding performers, aged 13 to 19, will take place at Hackney Empire on 6 April, from 10am to 6pm. Participants will need to impress the judges with talents like singing, dancing, music or comedy.

Finalists will be mentored by industry professionals and perform alongside headline acts at the Alter Ego Final, on 10 May, at Hackney Empire.

Book your audition or find out more at: hackneyempire.co.uk/alteregoauditions; or call: 020 8985 2424.

Stage is set for extravaganza

TWO variety shows at the Stratford Circus Arts Centre are set to raise money for a Hackney children's charity, which helps children with or affected by cancer.

The performances are being hosted by Stage and the City, the adult branch of Anna Fiorentini Theatre & Film School – founded by Hackney-born actor Anna Fiorentini – to raise funds for The Fiorentini Foundation, which gives children who have been affected by cancer access to theatre classes, providing escapism and respite.

The shows will take place at Stratford Circus Arts Centre, on 30 March, at 4pm and 7.45pm.

ULEZ comes into force

The Ultra Low Emissions Zone (ULEZ) comes into force on 8 April and will cover the existing congestion charge area, which falls within parts of Shoreditch

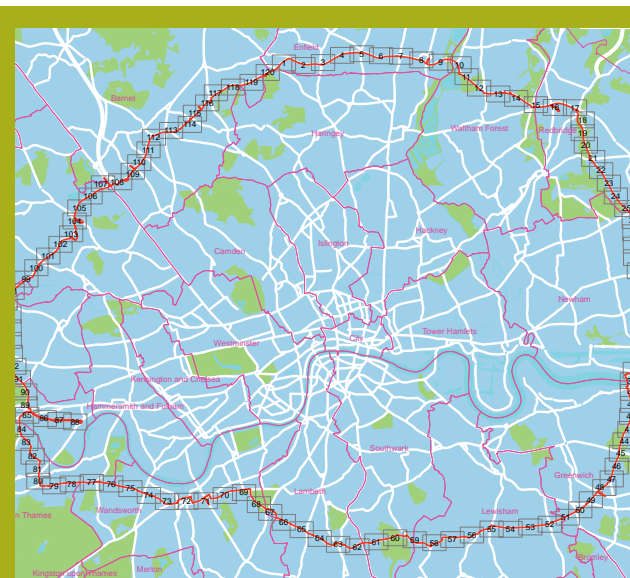

DRIVERS of older, more polluting vehicles travelling into central London will face an extra charge from 8 April.

Transport for London's (TfL) central London Ultra Low Emissions Zone (ULEZ) will cover the existing congestion charge area – which falls within parts of Shoreditch – and is aimed at tackling London's poor air quality. It will operate 24 hours a day, every day of the year.

As a rule, drivers of petrol vehicles manufactured before 2006 and diesel vehicles manufactured before 2015 will pay the extra charge, but some older vehicles do meet the standards. Charges are £12.50 per day for cars, motorcycles and mopeds, and vans and £100 per day for lorries, buses or coaches. This is on top of the £11.50 Congestion Charge.

The Council has been leading the way in the transition to cleaner vehicles by introducing electric charging points and its own electric vehicles. Through the Zero Emissions Network it also supports residents and

THE Zero Emissions Network (ZEN) helps over 1,300 businesses and 700 residents in the Shoreditch area switch to low emissions transport. So far it has:

Supported businesses to introduce 40 zero emissions taxis

Supported residents to replace 117 private vehicles with car club membership

Supported businesses to replace 29 polluting vehicles with electric ones or cargo bikes businesses in Shoreditch to replace vehicles with lower emissions alternatives.

The Council was also instrumental in lobbying TfL to ensure that the ULEZ will be extended in 2021 to cover the whole of Hackney.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor, said: “I wholeheartedly support the introduction of the central London ULEZ because it will improve air quality in central London and improve the emissions of vehicles travelling through our borough into the city.

“We fought successfully to get the ULEZ extended to cover the whole of Hackney in two years' time, which will make a significant difference to air quality. We're committed to tackling London's poor air quality.”

THE search for the next Arsenal star has started in Woodberry Down, with new regular 'Arsenal in the Community' training sessions for young people, on upgraded facilities.

Former player Jérémie Aliadière joined Mayor of Hackney Philip Glanville and local youngsters to demonstrate their football skills ahead of the first session, which is set to take place for four hours every week.

The Council, Berkeley Homes and the Arsenal Foundation invested £75,000 to revamp the estate's sports pitch, with a larger, better playing surface and new lighting, goalposts and fencing.

As well as football training provided by the club's community arm, the Council will provide a range of sports activities throughout the week for young people.

Mayor Glanville said: "It was fantastic to join so many eager young people keen to demonstrate their skills on these brilliant new facilities, and more importantly, have fun."

Jérémie, who played in the Arsenal Legends v Real Madrid Legends match last September that helped raise money to pay for the new facilities, said: "It's a pleasure to be here and help officially open the pitch.

"It's great to see that the money raised from the Legends match has gone to good use, and I feel privileged to have been able to play my part in that.

"I remember how important it was to have a local place to play football when I was growing up, and from being here today I can see how much this community will benefit from the facility."

Regular training sessions will start next month, with Arsenal in the Community writing to residents to give more details of how to sign up.

The pitch is free and open for anyone to use.

The improvements are part of the long-term regeneration of the area, with more than 5,500 new, modern, high-quality homes being built by a partnership between the Council, Berkeley Homes, Notting Hill Genesis Housing Association, Manor House Development Trust and the Woodberry Down Community Organisation.

When completed, the project will also create three new public parks, two schools and a children's centre, as well as a new library and community centre.

News in brief

Women's-only gym session launches at King's Hall Centre

KING'S Hall Leisure Centre, in Clapton, has launched a new women's-only gym session to mark International Women's Day.

The aim of the new session is to encourage more women to go to the gym and provide a relaxed and social atmosphere to exercise in.

Sera Terry, general manager at King's Hall Leisure Centre, said: "The sessions are designed to help encourage more females into physical activity and to remove barriers that may be in place."

One member who attended the first session said: "It's nice to be able to work out in a separate area, away from the main gym, and in a relaxed environment."

The women's-only sessions take place every Thursday, from 8pm to 10pm.

Salaam Peace wins the 'Sports Unites' accolade at the London Sport Awards

Salaam Peace wins 'Sport Unites' at the London Sport Awards

SALAAM Peace, based in Hackney, has been named a winner at the London Sport Awards, in the brand-new 'Sports Unites' category.

The category was created in partnership with the Mayor of London, and celebrates organisations that use sport and physical activity programmes to improve community cohesion and social integration in the city.

Salaam Peace was singled out for the diversity of its programmes at the award ceremony in Twickenham, West London, on 14 March.

Football initiatives like the Inter-Faiths Cup encourage young people of all religions to participate and build links in the community.

The organisation has also grown to include gym, cycling, basketball, hockey and cricket initiatives as well as homework clubs, volunteering programmes and mentoring.

Founder, Sabir Bham, said: "For me, sport – and in particular football – is a great way to bring people together, develop friendships and build respect."

Chris Scott, from London Sport, added: "The work that Salaam Peace has delivered in London over the past 15 years shows just how powerful sport can be in bringing communities together across London."

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. Beans are a nutrient dense food and this meatless chilli is a great way to enjoy them. Beans offer several health benefits, including being a great source of protein. The fibre and healthy starches in beans can also help prevent food cravings. People may feel fuller after consuming beans, which may stop overeating and even help with weight loss.

Chilli non carne

Makes 6-8 portions

Preparation time
10-15 mins

Cooking time
40-50 mins

Ingredients

- 2 medium onions
- 2 cloves of garlic
- 2 medium carrots
- 2 sticks of celery
- 2 peppers (any colour)
- 1 tbsp tomato puree
- 1 tsp chilli powder
- 1 tsp ground cumin
- 1 tsp of ground coriander
- 1/2 tsp ground cinnamon
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 400g tinned chickpeas
- 400g tinned red kidney beans
- 2 x 400g tinned chopped tomatoes
- 1 small bunch of coriander
- 2 limes
- 1 tbsp olive oil

Method

- Peel and finely chop the onion and garlic. Add the oil to a large pan on medium high heat. Soften the onion for 5-10 minutes. Once cooked through, add the garlic and cook for another 2 minutes
- Finely chop the carrots and celery, add to the pan and cook for 5 minutes
- Roughly chop the peppers and add with the tomato puree, tinned tomatoes, chilli powder, cumin, ground coriander, chopped coriander stalks, cinnamon and black pepper
- Pour in half a cup of water. Mash or blend a ¼ of the beans for texture, then add all the pulses to the pan. Bring to the boil and turn the heat down to a simmer with a lid, for about 30min stirring every now and again to stop it catching. If it becomes too dry add another half cup of water
- When it is all cooked, sprinkle coriander leaves on top and serve with a wedge of lime. Optional serving extras include tomato salsa, guacamole and beetroot hummus

Volunteer to be a City and Hackney prevention representative

HACKNEY residents who are passionate about improving health and wellbeing for residents are being invited to volunteer to deliver local health activities.

The local health and care watchdog aims to make the borough the happiest and healthiest it can be, and to do this it is asking for residents' help.

It is looking for local volunteers to help support fellow residents to live healthier lives.

Volunteers will work with the Council, the Clinical Commissioning Group, other health and care partners, as well as service managers and clinicians to make this happen.

They will play a role in ensuring that residents' voices are heard, working to develop and deliver local activities and services that support people to live healthier lives and feel better able to take control of their own health and wellbeing.

There are many opportunities to get involved depending on people's own interests and the time they are able to give.

Those interested can apply to either become a public representative or join a wider group of volunteers for specific projects.

All volunteers will be given training and reimbursement of expenses for travel, childcare and carers costs.

For more details or how to apply, email: info@healthwatchhackney.co.uk; call: 020 3960 7454; or visit: bit.ly/2UFP23S

Help Hackney Archives identify where these photos, taken by Gibson, were taken

CAN you help Hackney Archives identify these locations? The photographs on this page were taken by RA Gibson's studio and are presumed to be of locations in London.

Staff at the Archives have not yet been able to identify where the photographs were taken.

Do you recognise the distinctive doorways behind the people celebrating the Queen's Silver Jubilee in 1977? Or the derelict church, possibly bomb damaged during the Second World War?

Staff would also love to know the identity of the kosher restaurant with the striking interior, and the eye-catching blue and red shopping centre. Get in touch if you know.

Hackney Archives, based in Dalston, is carrying out a two-year project to digitise images from Gibson's studio so that they can be shared with people at events and online.

A key part of the project involves interviewing people who appear in the photographs so that their stories can be preserved as part of the history of Hackney.

More photos from RA Gibson's studio are on display at Hackney Museum and at: flickr.com/photos/hackney_archives

MORE INFO

 Hackney Archives will be featuring photographs from the Gibson collection in each edition of Hackney Today. If you recognise anyone in the photos, call: 020 8356 8925; or email: archives@hackney.gov.uk

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

You might not love your old clothes any more, but someone else might.

So instead of throwing them in the bin, use our textile banks.

We even want things that can't be reused like worn out socks, tatty clothes and old bed sheets. 70% of items are sold to raise money for good causes. Everything else is shredded and turned into new items like cloths and blankets.

There are over 100 banks across Hackney.
